What is Mediation?

Mediation is a process in which professional mediators help people to resolve disputes without the need to go to court or to prolong the continuation of difficult relationships.

Mediators are impartial and do not impose a solution. They simply create an environment in which the parties can talk with each other and create a lasting solution, which both parties are happy to accept.

Mediation is a voluntary process and will only take place if both parties agree.

Where Mediation takes place?

CLM's mediation service is available in Dublin, Wicklow and Limerick.

Wicklow mediation sessions take place in Bray or in an alternate agreed location in County Wicklow.

How does the Mediation process work?

Mediation is a confidential process where the terms of discussion are not disclosed to any party outside the mediation meeting.

Working together, two mediators will first meet with each party individually and will then bring the parties together.

The mediators will explain how the process works and will ensure that everyone is given a chance to explain their perspective on the situation.

The mediators will help to clarify the important issues and build consensus between parties.

If parties are unable to reach agreement, they can still go to court. Details about what went on at mediation will not be disclosed or used at a court hearing.

Who are we?

Established since 1975, CLM works to empower individuals experiencing disadvantage by providing free legal advice, mediation and information services. At a national level, we seek to have a wider impact through our campaigns for law reform and by acting as a resource for other advocacy organisations.

The service is available in Dublin, Wicklow and Limerick.

Who are our Mediators?

CLM's Mediators act in a voluntary capacity. They have received extensive training in mediation, conflict resolution and communication skills.

They are either accredited or certified by national or international professional bodies.
